Keith Ewing has been Professor of Public Law at King's College, University of London since 1989. He is the President of the Institute of Employment Rights (a trade union funded think tank), and Vice-President of the International Centre of Trade Union Rights. He is an active adviser to the TUC and TULO (the organisation of Labour Party affiliated trade unions). Professor Ewing's most recent book, The Bonfire of the Liberties, is to be published by Oxford University Press in February 2010. In addition to his work with Rae Cooper and Bradon Ellem on collective bargaining, he is preparing a collection of essays entitled Rights Left Behind which examines the failure of British governments to give effect to the UK's international obligations relating to the right to organise, the right to bargain and the right to strike.
